Fukuda, Top Rival Makarios Leaves Cyprus for Malta Of Tanaka, Quits As Insurgents Widen Their Control

By Don Oberdorfer

TOKYO, July 16 (WP).—Premier Kakuel Tanaka's chief political val resigned from the cabinet today with a denunciation of con-tions within the ruling Liberal Democratic party. Mr. Tanaka ickly filled the post with one of his most trusted associates in an fort to forestall further damage to his leadership.

The resignation of Finance Minister Takeo Fukuda was Mr. anaka's most serious challenge since he took office two years ago, appeared to be the opening shot in a Fukuda campaign to oust Mr. Tanaka at next summer's party convention or even before Mr. Fukuda's resignation followed by four days the resignation of Deputy Premier Takeo Miki, another prominent conservative politician.

These moves, flowing from severe party losses in the recent parliamentary elections and Mr. Tanaka's low public popularity. appear to have weakened the Premier substantially.

However, his countermoves today indicated a determination to remain in power.

It was somewhat of an upset that this "crown prince" was nudged aside by the tough, ambitious Mr. Tanaka, largely on grounds that the party had to have a "new face" to half its political decline.

Mr. Fukuda, 69, still appears to be the choice of the elders, seven of whom met yesterday to consider the party crisis. WASHINGTON, July 16 (WP). -After 10 weeks of sitting behind closed doors, hearing evidence, the House Judiciary Committee is expected to decide next week whether to recommend that President Piron be impresented.

Next Monday or Triesday the committee will begin meeting in open—but not televised—sessions to debate and vote on articles of impeachment. The panel's chairn, Rep. Peter Rodino ir., D. N.J. said that a final committee vote is expected by the end of

A vote by the committee recommending impeachment, which would send the issue to the full House, seems virtually assured. Nixon Reported Reinvigorated' By Summits

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif., July 16 (AP).—White House Chief of Staff Alexander Haig jr. said yesterday that a mouth of summits abroad has reinforced President Nixon's determination to stay on the job and continue "the leadership of the past five years." In an interview, Gen. Haig said Mr. Nixon returned from his trips to the Middle East and the Soviet Union "intellectually and spiritually reinvigorated." He pictured Mr. Nixon as ready to fight inflation at home and seek peace abroad while leaving responsibility for his Watergate defense to his lawyers.

He said Mr. Nixon is well on the mend" from a June attack of phlebitis and that there is little danger of compeachment. The committee staff and most scholars have insisted that he can be impeached and removed from office for serious misuse of power, which need not be an indictable crime, but might be much more serious to the wel-

In giving weight to the evidence, a question is, may the committee act simply on a showing of probable cause, like a groud jury, or must it find the President guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, like a trial jury, or something in between? The House action is not a trial. If the full House votes impeachment, the Senate would try the charges.

These are subjective judgments each member must make for himself. The committee must decide whether to draft narrow or broad articles of impeachment, for instance, whether the President should be impeached for a single act, or to site a list of actions as showing be failed to carry out his constitu-tional duty to "take care" that the laws are faithfully ex-

'I am not dead. I am by your side ...bearer of the flag of ... struggle' —ARCHBISHOP MAKARIOS

From Were Dispatches BEIRUT, July 16.-Archbishop Makarios today left Cyprus on a British plane and landed tonight in Maits. His departure came as rebel forces extended their control over the island. Fighting was continuing but apparently with diminishing intensity

The archbishop, whom rebel-controlled radios had reported killed yesterday, asked for refuge m one of two sovereign British military bases on Cyprus this morning after spending the night broadcasting appeals for resistance from his home town of Paphos, 50 miles west of the Defense Ministry sources said in London that the archhishop decided to leave Paphos when rebel gunboats began shelling the town. A British military helicopter was fired on as it lifted the archbishop from Paphos to a British military hase, but the craft was not hit,

There was speculation that the archbishop was en route for New York, where a meeting of the United Nations Security Council has been convened tonight at the request of the

Cyprus envoy. In Valletta, Malta, Archbishop Makarios was given a head-ofstate welcome by Malta's Governor Gen. Sir Anthony Mamo and Prime Minister Dom Mintoff. In speeches on radio Paphos. the archbishop repeatedly cherged that Greece had planned the coup. In one of the speeches, he declared:

who is talking to you. You have elected me. I am not dead. I am by your side, a co-fighter and the bearer of the flag of the national struggle.

"The junta will not pass." Fighting continued on Cyprus between the Greek officer-led Cypriot National Guard, a 10,000man force that rose in revolt yesterday, and the 1.200-man Tactical Police Reserve, which is loyal to Archbishop Makarios.

The British armed forces radio, reporting that there had been fighting throughout the night. said it included serious shooting incidents in the four main communities — Nicosia, Famagusta, Larneca and Limassol. Most of the fighting centered on police sta-

LONDON, July 16-Britain announced today that it still regards Archbishop Makarios as the President of Cyprus. There were reports that Turkey was threatening unilateral action on the island unless Britain agreed to a joint intervention, Turkey's ambassador here, at his own request, called on the Foreign Office tonight. But it was not certain if he was handing over a note formalizing reports from Ankara quoting Turkish officials as seeking intervention on Cyprus.

Sampson Is Veteran Fighter For Union of Cyprus, Greece

By Michael T. Kaufman

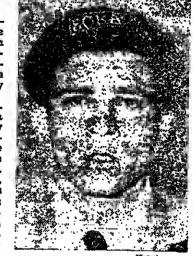

NEW YORK, July 16 (NYT).— Last Jan. 30, when Gen. George Grivas was buried at a mountain hideout from which he had commanded Cyprus'a struggle for independence from Britain, tha major eulogy was delivered by Nikos Giorgiades Sampson.

Mr. Sampson, 38, who had joined Gen. Grivas's guerrillas as a rose to command a terrorist as-sassination squad, vowed beside the general's hier to fight for the union of the island with Greece.
At the time of the funeral, Mr. Sampson—who adopted his alias under British rule as his surname was a member of Par-liament, the publisher of two newspapers and, according to some Greek and Cypriot exiles, the leader of an armed band of thugs. Five years ago, some of the sources assert, he was convicted in his native Famagusta on a charge of thievery.

Yesterday, it was reported in Nicosia that he had been sworn in as President of the island republic to succeed Archbishop Makarios, who had held the office since independence in August,

In the struggle against British control, the archbishop and Gen. Grivas were allies. But their ways parted when the archbishop set-tled for independence, forswearing the general's vision of unification with Greece. Mr. Sampson supported Gen. Grivas; he also reportedly maintained close tles with rightists in Greece.

As the leader of the assassination unit in the 1950s, Mr. Sampson was linked by British authorities with the marder of 25 English soldiers. In his newspaper Machi -the name means combat-he

British withdrawal from the aborted Suez campaign of 1956. "I reduced my pressure, leaving it mainly to execution groups in the towns to keep up the war of nerves." the general wrote. "Apart from shrappel falling into our sector and wounding four people, up to oow there have been oo iocidents,"

Mr. Denktash charged that the coup was a 'take-over by the Greek junta" in Athens.

Asked about the newly proclaimed President, Nikos Samp-son, he said: "I do not think Sampson will be well received by the Greek Cypriots, I do not think he is up to the job. I do not think the junta have found the man to carry the Greek Cypriot people with them in what they are trying to do."

The report from Nicosia also described the Presidential Palace as fire-blackened, with large shell holes in the walls. The nearby Kykko Monastery where pro-Makarios policemen had held out against army tanks for most of yesterday, also had been shelled. Thick cloods of black smoke rose from a police station near the British school in Nicosia. Many street and traffic lights were flattened by tanks which had churned up long sections of the city's roads.

Scattered shots and shuttered silence in the Greek quarter of the city contrasted with the almost normal activity in the Turk-ish section, where shops were open and traffic circulated freely. Mr. Sampson announced today that he had appointed several ministers to his cabinet and held his first meeting with them. anti-Communists-did not hide their dislike of Archbishop Makarios, the President of Cyprus since independence in 1960,

The archbishop always maintained that he shared the traditional desire of Greek Cyprious for Enosis, or union with the Greek motherland, but insisted that it was not a practical solution in the face of fierce opposition from ethnic Turks, who make up 18 per cent of the island's population of 650,000,

This attitude by the archbishop smacked of treason to some rightist Greek Cypriots, who also worried about the President's close tics with Cyprus's large and influeotial Communist party.

National Guard Accused

This past spring, Archbishop Makarios accused the Cypriot National Guard, which is commanded by 650 Greek officers oo cootract, of supplying arms sod Inspiration to a terrorist group fighting for Enosis. Two weeks ago, the archbishop ordered the removal of the officers from the island, a direct challenge to Greek authority in Cypriot

As a diplomat put it, "We knew there would be a reaction, but we didn't know what it would be." Yesterday the answer came.

Greek-speaking people have lived on Cyprus for thousands of years. Because of its strategic years. Because of its strategic position in the eastern Mediterranean, it was invaded by a long list of cooquerors who built an occasional castle, added a new accept to the ethnic strain of the populace, and passed on.

Cyprus was seized by the Turks in 1571 and incorporated into the Ottoman Empire. During more than 300 years of Turkisb rule. the Orthodox archbishop of Cyprus, the "Ethnarch," served as both the spiritual and temporal leader of the Greek Cypriots. But through the centuries, the Cypriot Orthodox Church kept alive the idea of Enosis, and in 1821 the archbishop and many leading churchmen were executed hy the Turks for their activities. As Lawrence Durrell commented in his book "Bitter Lemons," "From this, one could see just bow deeply hidden, and in what depths of unconscious historical process, the roots of Enosis lay

Island With a Dream

Or as a Cyprlot official put turies with one dream-to unite with Greece."

The British leased the island in 1878 and incorporated it into the Commonwealth in 1925. In the 1950s, agitation for Enosis erupted in a campaign of guerrilla warfare. The guerrilla organization was the original EOKA, and its leader was the late Gen. George Grivas, a Greek Cypriot and legendary guerrilla fighter from the days of the Greek civil Gen. Grivas commanded great loyalty among his country-

Archbishop Makarios had been exiled by the British in 1956, but was allowed to return in 1959 as a hero. With the Turks opposing Enosis, the archbishop agreed to what has been called a "shotcun marriage" -- Greek and Turkisn Cypriots joining in an independent state with the archbishop as President.

When trouble broke out between the two communities in 1963. President Makerlos invited in a contingent of Greek officers to command the National Guard, including Gen. Grivas. A UN peace-keeping force arrived in 1964. It controlled the fighting uotli 1967, when it flared up again. At that point President Makarios ordered Gen. Grivas expelled from the island.

The arcobishop and his governmeot continued to proclaim their belief in Enosis. But as Cypriot independence took hold their commitment was clearly diminishing. As an official out it receotly, —none of those long waiting lines.

It's nothing more than that. Everybody believes it cannot be achieved. We're better off being independent, but we can't say it publicly. Enosis is part of our tradition.

To those who believed in Enosis, Archbishop Makarios was a traitor. In 1971. Gen. Grivas slipped back into Cyprus and formed Amnesty for EOKA-B Several assassination attempts against the archhishop failed, but the movement was ; continuing annoyance. Then, last January. Gen. Grivas died of a heart attack and President Makarios saw his chance to eradicate the movement. He offered amnesty to any member of EOKA-B who would surrender and lay down his arms. But only several dozen took advantage of the offer.

Meanwhile, anti-Makarius agitation was growing within the Cypriot National Guard and its corps of Greek officers. Ob-servers point out that the strongman of the Greek junts which took over in November, Brig. Gen. Dimitrios Ioannidis, served in Cyprus in the mid-1960s and is known to despise the archbishop. And as a virulent anti-Communist. Gen. Ioannidis was incensed by Archbishop Makarios's alliance with the Cypriot Communists, his independent foreign policy and his frequent trips to Communist capitals.

Matters came to a head this past spring. The archhishop felt that a new crop of cadets appointed to officers' training school in the National Guard were disloyal to him. He demanded that the appointments be withdrawn. The Greek officers refused Then a large cache of arms was stolen from a National Guard training center and the archbishop declared that the theft was engi-neered by Greek officers to supply EOKA-B. When police started rounding up members of the movement and recovering the arms, the terrorist group replied mooth that left six people dead -mainly well-known supporters of the archbishop.

Moves by Makarios President Makarios decided to move more firmly. He announced that the term of national service would be cut from 24 to 14 months, thus reducing reliance on Greek officers. And in a blunt letter to President Phaidon Gizikis of Greece, he requested that the nificers be withdrawn. In that letter, the archbishop charged that the Greek govern-ment "has been following a pol-icy calculated to abolish the Cypriot state." and that it had tried to turn the Cypriot National Guard into "an internal occupation army."

with posters and leaflets calling the archbishop a "power-hungry monk" who had committed "treason against the Greek nation." To many diplomats. Archbishop Makarios was the linehpin of Cyprus the one man who could keep the troubled nation together. They have worried for a long time that fanatical rightists would gamble on chaos. "What I'm afraid of." a diplomat said a few weeks ago, "is the assassination of Makarios. They might just try to create an inferno, out of which they think rhev'll set their way."

The Egyptian move means that the world's three largest banksthe Bank of America, Pirst Na-tional City and Chase Manhat-tan—will have investment and operational windows on Egypt's once tightly socialistic economy, which Mr. Sadat is trying to overhaul with the help of foreign investment and aid.

Mr. Simon and Egyptian Deputy Premier Abdel Aziz Hegazy also announced that the two countries would negotiate a tax-equalization treaty to avoid double taxation on American firms that do business here. And they will form a Joint Project Development. Institute, to be headquartered in Cairo, that will evaluate the ambitious economic development plans of Mr. Sadat's government, Buoyant Note Mr. Simon and Mr. Hegazy ended their meetings on a buoyant note that characterized the three days of talks. The American official expressed con-fidence in Egypt's economic future and the Egyptian repeat-ed piedges to cut red tape and make conditions as attractive as Dr. Alfred J. But Mr. Hegazy showed new signs of Egyptian sensitivity to. outside questioning of Egypt's management of its economy, and hinted at some disappointment with American commitments on foreign aid.

The prospect is for a trans-formation of the currently treeless Icelandic landscape, Probably more than any other man, Mr. Biarnason, since 1935 the country's second holder of the forestry post, is responsible for this.

He points out that when the Vikings came in the 9th century. 80 per cent of the vegetated land of Iceland was covered with rather scruffy bative birch. There were a few species of willow, but otherwise whatever tree species once grew here had been wiped out by the ice ages and, because of the island's remoteness had not returned.

Because the birches provided fuel and, to a limited extent, building material, they were increasingly depleted. But, in Mr. Bjarnason's view, the real disaster began in the 16th century when the king of Spain sent some knitted wood garments in Henry VIII of England. This inspired the woolen textile in-dustries of Britain and the Netherlands, and led to a pressing demand for wool.

The forests of the Scottish Highlands and the rolling slopes of Iceland gave way to pastirage and today sheep rule the land.

MUSIC IN FRANCE-Unique 'Salome' in Roman Theater

By David Stevens

ORANGE, France, July 16 ·IHT .- The Orange Festival came of age this year with its one-time-only production of Richard Strauss's "Salome." unique in the literal sense that there will be no second performance and in the artistic sense that it was an experience that could not quite be duplicated elsewhere.

The stage and the immense wall of Orange's 2,000-year-old Roman theater needed hardly any cosmetics—a double flight of stairs, a cistern, some torchesto pass for Herod's palace, which in any case would have been a contemporary piece of architecture. Leonie Rysanek, who sensationally undertook the role for the first time only three years ago. was the Salome, and John Vickers learned the part of Herod for the occasion and he will also sing his first Pollione in next Saturday's "Norms" here, to give the excellent cast an extra touch of luxury.

The Theatre Antique also had its singular acoustical propertles, distinctly favorable to voices vis-a-vis the orchestra. And in this case, the French Radin's Orchestre National was under the knowing and delicate control of Rudolf Kempe. The net result was unlike anything "Salome" could be in a closed theater, in which generally all but the most powerful voices are swallowed up in Strauss's cense orchestra! fabric, Here, the music has the transparency and airiness of one of the composer's late scores, and the text came through with notable clarity.

National played for The Kempe with subtlety and attention to detail-the winds especially seemed more exposed than they would in an orchestra pil -but responded with ample power when Kempe finally called for it in the final scene.

Social Message

The Viennese stage director. Alfred Wopman, seemed concerned with filling the large playing area with movement, which he sometimes did effectively, sometimes not so convincingly—as with some frantic rushing up and down stairs for Herod. He invented a group of peopleseemingly poor masses, huddled around the edge ni the palace. who emerged to listen to Jo-kansan's desunciations of the low moral tone of Herod's court. At the end it was they, nnt 'he guards, who responded to Herod's call for someone to kill Salome. and they then invaded the palace as the final chords sounded. A striking effect, but a dubious suggestion of a social message where one is hardly needed or intended.

Rysonek was a stunning Salome, singing in the important upper range with power, cutting brilliance and a touch of wildness, while her dance was, for the most part, fetchingly seductive, It is not often that a leading dramatic tenor cares to bother with Herod, but Vickers showed how effective it can be, giving the tetrach's decadence an undercurrent of former substance and present menace, as well as reminding that this unpleasant man has some languidly beautiful things to sing Ruth Hesse's Herodias-who shared with her spouse the most ornate of Jean-Claude Sotto's lavish costumeswas sumptuously sung and acted, while Thomas Stewart was an intense Jokanaan but vocally severely taxed by the holy man's most fervent utterances. Horst Laubeothal's clear lyric tenor and Marga Schiml's rich mezzo represented layish casting as Narraboth and the page.

The Kissinger Case

When Sen. J. William Fulbright emerged From the closed hearing of the Senate Forelan Relations Committee on the secretary of state's relationship with wiretap activities, he asked newsmen why the media were so interested in the matter. And he had his own possible answer: "It could be part of an effort to unseal Dr. Kissinger. I wonder it they're gelling at detente by getting at Dr. Kissinger?"

It is a possible answer, but in all probability only a partial one. The charges against the secretary may well be, as the senator described them, "a tempest in a teapot," hut It is one which reflects, in its own way, the much larger tempest of Watergate, and the mood in the country and among newsmeu which Watergate created. It is quite plausible that there are those who would take advantage of that mood to attempt to discredit a policy they dislike—but that is also true of Watergate itself. It certainly does not follow that Watergate was the creation of such an attempt.

Among the inevitable by-products of the unholy practices revealed in the wake of the Watergate break-in is a broad skeptleism about public officials, and an almost equal skepticism about the use of the term "national interest" to cloak or excuse those practices. This attitude did not spring wholly from Watergate; it has been developing ever since the U-2 episode in Eisenhower's administration, and reached a climax with the national distaste for Vietnam. Watergate only focused the aura of permit, suspicions on a group of living individuals. associated with the Nixon administration.

Within this aura, a premium has been placed upon the investigative journalism that was so largely responsible for bringing out the facts and implications of Watergate. That this can-and too often does-degenerate into a competitive game of cops-androbbers within the media is another byproduct of the show in the center ring.

All of this was injected into a situation in which the United States-and Mr. Kissinger -were involved in delicate and difficult negotiations, moving toward goals that many Americans opposed, for reasons which may often be contradictory, or at least very varied: fear of the Soviet Union, disapprobation of its government, mistrust of the motives of Washington,

It seems likely, now, that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will give Mr. Klasinger the clean bill of health he has asked: President Nixon has assumed full responsibility for the wiretaps that are in question. The secretary of state himself will probably thus be able to conduct forelgn affairs without personal handicaps. But the Watergate mood does infect this aspect of government, as it does all the rest, and the difficulties of achieving the success of the many fine initiatives that Washington has made in foreign relations are thereby compounded. The chief consolation for those who recognize the absolute necessity of such initiatives is that, so far, they have moved faster, and in better directions, than the Watergate ball-and-chain might seem lo

Greece Gift to Cyprus

In a letter to the President of Grecce dated July 6, Archbishop Makarios accused the military rulers in Athens of planning to murder him and furnished what he called "irrefutable" evidence that Greek officers commanding the Cyprus National Guard were plotting with EOKA underground forces to overthrow his government. He damanded that Greece recall the 650 officers.

Athens either stailed or refused the archbishop's request. The result was the tragic event of Monday, which threatens to ignite not only civil war in Cyprus but conflagration between Greece and Turkey that could desiroy NATO's southern tlank and carry the seeds of a wider, multinational conflict.

The situation on Cyprus and the fate of President Makarios remain unclear; but filere can be no doubt that the responsibility for this barbaric putsch rests with the squalid military dictatorship in Greece. Gen. Ionnides and his faceless hencomen consclously and deliberately condoned aggression against another country in direct violation of the pledge that they reaffirmed only last month in NATO's Atlantic declara-

It is almost beyond belief that the Greek officers would attempt to install as President of Cyprus one Nikos Sampson, confessed murderer, prolessional bully boy and fanatical supporter of Enosis (union with Greece). This action leaves no doubt that the goal of the coup against President Makarlos is in fact the union with mainland Greece which the arcbbishop long ago abandoned as unrealistic in the face of Turkish opposition.

Enosis is indeed an unrealistic objective and the first move in that direction by the usurpers in Nicosla ls certain to bring a military reaction from Turkey that will shatter the fragile peace between Greek and Turkish Cypriots, maintained for the last 10 years by a UN force.

Clearly the first goal of American, ailled and UN diplomacy must be to prevent war between Greece and Turkey. Unless that can be headed off, the whole volatile Eastern Mediterranean could blow up. The UN is unquestionably the place for the legitimate government of Cyprus to bring its case against Greece and Greece's agents on the

Once the immediate crisis is passed there may be time for serious rethinking on the part of the State Department and especially the Pentagon about the wisdom of propping up with economic assistance and modern military hardware a regime in Athens that has buried freedom, tortured its citizens and now has committed aggression against another country.

What has happened on Cyprus dramatizes the bankruptcy of a cynical U.S. policy toward Greece. After that tragedy it should be more difficult for American policy makers to argue that the tyranny in Greece is strictly a problem for the Greeks to resulve. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Talking of Oil

oil consuming countries are discovering an impressive-if belated-readiness to cooperare in devising contingency plans for dealing with any luture oil shortages. Against the givom; forebodings of last winter, the proxress made in the 12-member energy coordination group, meeting in Brussels, is unexpactedly encouraging.

The French attitude toward collective emergency pooling arrangements remains to be ciarified, but there are signs that the rigid standoffish posture adopted by former French Foreign Minister Jobert at last February's Washington energy conterence is not being maintained so adamantly by the new French government. Until a deal is actually struck, however, it would be foothardy to assume that the long-clusive unity of oil consumers is at last within grasp.

The progress already made consists of a general acceptance among the 12 memberstates (not including France; of the principle that allocations from an emergency pool should be linked with specific measures to curtail consumption should any shortage

Yet to be decided are the precise targets for self-suificiency-say, a 60-to-90-day reserve supply and the degree of shortfall that would trigger emergency pooling arrangements.

If successfully concluded and implemented, these accords would do much to minimire the vulnerability of the industrial world to any general or selective boycott from the oli producers, such as occurred at the height of the Arab-Israeli war last autumn. So far. the consuming nations' efforts toward consensus seem to have been accomplished without stirring resentment or bitterness from the producers, who formerly bristled at any suggestions that the consumers might band together to confront the producers as a group. Part of the reason seems to be the dawning realization among the producing nations that security and continuity of supply is in their interests, as well as in the consumers'.

As a result, it is now beginning to appear that the economic distress caused by oil price rises is becoming more dangerous to the industrial world than the prospect of boscott,

U.S. Envoys: They Only Wait Who Also Serve

By C. L. Sulzberger

TIDDA, Saudi Arabia.—It is startling to recall that 50 years ago the United States, which is now the world's most diplomatically involved nation, had no adequate foreign service. Only in July, 1924, when the act sponsored by Rep. John Jacob Rogers of Masachusetts became law, old today's efficient system of representation develop.

The idea of having regular foreign envoys was always somewast repugnant to most Americans who were imbued with a romactic conception of isolation from the nasty outside world from which they and their an-cestors had fled. A Department of Foreign Affairs was created :n 1761 by the revolutionary government which had to enlist sid abroad and finally to negotiate In 1789 this was reorganized into the State Depart-

By establishing a uniform scale of salaries and representation allowances talways far too stingy: It became possible for individuals without private means to serve the State Department.

One useful result of the welding of diplomatic and consular officials into the same career service was that it opened doors to the highest office to competent consuls who would otherwise have been prevented from playing active policy-making roles. An outstanding example has been Robert Murphy, a roung vice-consul in Munich when the Rogers Act became effective. He subsequently rose to the rank of ambassaoor and underscretary of state.

The Press And the 'Opposition'

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON,-Like it or not the press has become an issue and a source of controversy -in the conflict over Watergate and impeaciment.

From both political flanks.

urgent warnings have been sent that whenever and however Mr. Nixon's case is disposed of, the press's turn will come next, "It scares me to hear the number of people who really want same controls put on the press," says a conservative friend from Idaho, "You, will be fighting for your civil liberties for the rest of this century like you've never had to light before," says a liberal from New York, "and I'm not certain you'll win."

How did the press get into this role? Well, the traditions of muckraking investigative jour-nalism are old ones in America. Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein of The Washington Post were following the footsteps of generations of police reporters when they began scouting on their own among the witnesses the victims and perpetrators of the Watergate crime and cover-up. As their original stories (viewed akeptically by many other re-porters) were confirmed and the enormity of the case became elear, the huge forces of modern electronic and mint lonnalism descended on the President and Pack lournalism siways produces excesses, whether the story is a war, a campaign or a scandal. But there is something else that explains why the press has not been able to preserve its neutrality in this struggle. And that is, very simply, that the political opposition—the Democratic party—has defected in its role as an

Clammed Up

Ever since impeachment became a possibility, the responsible leaders of the Democratic party have clammed up tight. Their reasons for doing so are clear. They are acutely aware that since a Demoeratic Congress is literally sitting in judgment on a Republican President, they must not give the public any indication they are prejudging the case for partisan

But the silence Democratie leaders have adopted in their quest for nonpartisanship bas left it to the press to provide the commentary and, on occasion, the rebuttal-to the vigorous elforts by Mr. Nixon and his allies to aimpe public opinion to his own · ends.

Thus, when the Judiciary Committee Democrats refused to open its hearings to coverage reporters were forced to use leaked and nonattributed information to give the readers another perspective on the proceedings then that dential lawyer James St. Clair. As a result, the press has become as Pat Buchanan and other White House critics note-a party to the dispute over leaked testimony, not a neutral referee.

Unfortunately, this habit of the political opposition letting the press do its work for it is becoming a pattern in American public affairs. During the Victnot the Republican party leaders who challenged the assumptions and facts underlying the policies of Presidents Kennedy and Johnson. The Republicans wrapped themselves in togas of bipartisanship, just as the Democrats now are taking vows of nonpartisan-

Modern presidents are happy to exploit this habit, knowing it is ssier to win a public relations hattle with the press than a political war with the opposition party. Mr. Nixon refuses even to allow his advisers to testify before committees of the Democratic Congress, while encouraging them to engage reporters in de-bate at press conferences and on television panel shows. Recent presidents have been positively churany with the noninal leaders of the political op position-witness Kennedy's and Johnson's palsy-walsy relationship with the late Everett Dirksen and Mr. Nizon's courtship of Mike they have carried on public vendettes against "opposition" jourmalists.

"Who elected David Halberstam to run our Vietnam policy?" Kerinedy demanded of The New York Thurs "Are you running for something?" Mr. Nixon asked Dan Rether

The answer, of course, is that no one elected any journalist to anything. But where are those who were elected to provide opposition to the President? Where s the opposition party? They're busy being bipartisen or nonpartisen. And it's their delection that has east the press in the

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Pacific Coast Coin Mart Wins Suit A state district court judge in Dallas has dismissed charges brought by the Texas state attorney general's office alleging that Racific Coast Coin Exchange was selling unregistered securities and engaging in deceptive, misleading or fraudulent practices in the sale of $1,000 face-amount bags of silver coins through marginaccount contracts. Officials at the Californiabased coin broker say the court's decision allows Pacific Coast to seek compensation from the state related to the legal expenses and other costs incurred as a result of the April 18 restraining order that balted selling of the margin-account contracts in Texas. The New York State attorney general's office has obtained a temporary restraining order against Pacific Coast's operations in New York. That order was based on charges similar to the allegations made in the Texas action.

U.S. automakers' domestic sales rate in the early July period slumped 28 per cent from last year's pace, but analysts cautioned the conparisons were distorted by effects of dealer sales-incentive contests, During the July 1-10 period automakers sold 175,796 cars. down from 214,918 last year. Analysts say that deapite the distortions, the sales level is in line with expectations and indicates the automaters' prognosis of a slow rebound from last winter's disastrous decline is still correct. Ford's sales rate for the period was 49 per cent behind last year. But the precipitous decline reflects both a sales contest which ended July 10 last year. which sent Ford sales to a record a year ago. and a contest which ended June 30 of this year. which apparently "borrowed" sales from the early July period, leaving the Ford figures depressed by a double impact, according to one analyst. Deliveries of General Motors cars. which have been most hurt by the sales slump this year, were about 16 per cent behind last year a rate. Last year, its Buick and Oldsmobile divisions both ended big contests June 30. and as a result their early July sales were unusually low last year. Chrysler's sales rate was about 22 per cent behind last year, and American Motors fell 4.9 per cent.

What would you call a company that did $3,900 million in 73 and looks like this?

We call it Tenneco.

Hegoblade-Marquileas-Tenneco markets pichnum quality from IIIII to in-bles under the Sun Glante brand, plus those packaged products—almonds, dates and raisins.

Tenneco makes things.
Things like small auto parts, big tractors and the largest nuclear still affect out Even so, many paople still refer to us as a gas pipelining company.

That we ware and still are, with the largest natural gas pipeline in the U.S. But gas transmission (18% of our 1973 revegas transmission (18%). nues) is only one important part of our slot,... Which is why we're asking you to ultra-large crude carriers to deliver the energy last.

As the company whose J I Case is turning out flects of heavy-duly construction equipment and farm traciors to macl increasing building and agricultural needs.

As the company whose Walker Manufacturing is producing auto exhaust systems for one out of every four cars on U.S. roads today and expanding its output and sales in Europe.

See us as the company whose Chemicala Division (8% or revenues) is a major supplier of versatile plastics. And whosa Packaging Corporation of America (8% of revenues) supplies paperboard, shipping continuous and cadons for all shipping containers and cartons for all kinos of goods.

In agriculture and land davelopment, (6% of revenues), as the company that is packing and marketing farm fresh vegetables, raisins, almonds, and dates under the name Sun Giant®. And developing whole new communities.

Think of us as the company whose total sales grew from $2,600 to $3,900 million since 1970.

THE CURVE OF BINDING ENERGY

By John McPhee. Farrar, Straus & Giroux. 231 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt is the 11th and latest of those remarkable reports by John McPhee that appear with pleasing frequency in the pages of The New Yorker: then make their way into book form and demand to be re-reed. Except this time the experience of doing so is not as exhibitating as usual. For instead of exploring in delightful depth some relatively shallow subject—as he has done so often in his previous books Mr. McPhee has brought us a frightening message of potential doom. This time he has explored the world of a theoretical physicist named Theodore B. Taylor. It is Dr. Taylor's main professional concern at the moment to convey to the public his belief that with the growing availability of fissionable nuclear material and declassified technical knowhow, it is now not only feasible for almost any country in the world to fabricate an atomic bomb, but it is also possible for smaller groups of individuals to do so as well. Indeed, in Dr. Taylor's highly competent judg-ment, it is not inconceivable that a single person could put together ao atomic weapon in the privacy of his home laboratory. And what with everything else there is to worry about these days.

Dr. Taylor's prospect may seem to some readers an intolerable additional burden to have to take on.

"THE Curve of Binding Energy"

Still, for all the gloom it purveys. "The Curve of Binding Energy" should not be passed over. For one thing, it is irresistibly timely. It was published almost simultaneously with India's recent detonation of an atomic device. So it makes a valnable contribution to the intensi-fied debate that this event has understandably aroused. For if Dr. Taylor's views represent one extreme of the spectrum of opinion, Mr. McPhee's painstaking elucidation of them helps to clarify other positions in the debate, including the opposing view that for a single person to tabricate a fission bomb, he would need "all the wherewithal of a small Manhattan Project." For another thing, Mr. Mc-Phee's book is more than an elucidation of one scientist's extreme alarm. It is also a pro-lile of Dr. Taylor himself. And Dr. Taylor is, to say the least, an interesting figure. In 1949, he went straight from falling his doctoral exams at the California. Institute of Technology to designing more efficient fission bombs at Los Alamos, among them were Davy Crockett, which to its time was the lightest and io its time was the lightest and smallest fission bomb ever made." and the Super Oralloy Bomb, according to Mr. McPhee the largest-yield fission bomb that has ever been exploded any-

Later he undertook the design of an interplanetary rocket ship that was to be as large as a 1s-story building and propelled by shock waves from a series of stomic explosions—a project that had the support of no less than Niels Bohr, Harold Urey, Curtis LeMay, Hans Bethe and Wernher yon Braun, among others (and a project that was only suspended with the implementation of the limited-test-ban treaty of

And where Mr. McPhee is not engaged in bringing Ted Taylor's extraordinary personality vividly to life on the page (with home movies of Dr. Taylor withdrawing movies of Dr. Taylor withdrawing for two-day thinking trips while still remaining in the physical presence of his family or absentmindedly trying to start his Volkswagen with a hotel key). he peppers his pages with marvelous little Gee Whiz vignettes about how theoretical physicists prefer to work to the sound of classical music, while experimental physicists do not: about how in 1944 cists do not: about how in 1944 a Japanese incendiary balloon temporarily shut down the re-sctor in Henford Wash, that was slowly producing the plu-torium-239 that would eventually level Nagasaki; about the ti eory that some of the Los Fiamos scientists held that Aismos scientists heid that Flungary was once scuretly populated by Martians; thus explaining the wanderlust of Hungarian gypsies, the fact that the Hungarian language is not related to any of the languages spoken in surrounding countries, and "the unearthly intelligence of Teller, Wigner Szilard, and Neumann—Hungarians all."

mann-Hungarians all." Finally, "The Curve of Binding Energy" unintentionally supplies a means for defusing its explo-sive argument. At least it does sive argument. At least it does for a reader who is psychohistorically inclined. For one cannot help noting that Dr. Taylor has always been obsessed with explosives. As a boy, "He enjoyed putting potassium chlorate and sulfur under Mexico City streetcars. There was a flash, and a terrific bang." As a Cal Tech student, he liked to plant loud but harmless nitrogen lodice bumbs in the keyholes of the doors of friends who were off on weekends. And as a practicing physicist, he designed better fis-sion bombs and dreamed of himing transcontinental tuooels to provide an alternative to the in-efficiencies of jet flight.

- He would admit to a pure fascination with ouclear expin-sives." Mr. McPhee reports. fascination wholly oo an intellectual plane, disjunct from practical application." Maybe 50. but one cannot help thinking it no wooder that in Dr. Taylor's maturity he is obsessed with the threat of people building and setting off Illicit bombs. And this despite the cogency of his reasoning and the clarity with which Mr. McPhee has illustrated it. is at least one major point on the side of those who disagree with Dr. Taylor and argue that his obsession is "more a James Bond fear than a real ooe." or that, as James Schlesinger put it when he was chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. "A self-respecting ambitious terrors. has better things to do than to take nuclear material," and construct homemade atomic bombs

A recurring headache for standard bidders is the rebid problem that arises when the opening bid is one diamond and the response is two clubs. If the opener has a minimum hand he has various options-and on occasion all of them are unsatisfactory.

Consider the North band shown in the diagram. Some players might pass. Some might bid one spade following the old rule that prescribes "the suit below the singleton." Some might bid one heart, which is rather better: responder will bid spades if he can, so the opener can bid dis-monds on the next round and touch all bases.

But most players, especially those who do not bid four-card major suits, would bid one dia-mond. They are then in trouble after a response of two clubs. A two no-trump rebid would wrongly suggest a balanced hand with 13-15 points. A bid of two spades or two hearts would be a reverse, promising extra strength and length in diamonds, although some partnerships relax these requirements by special agreement. The third alternative is to lie about the diamond suit by bidding two diamonds, an action that guarantees five cards in the suit and strongly suggests six This was the choice made by North on the deal shown. South made a risky bid of two no-trump on the second round. instead of raising routinely to three dismonds, and his partner, full of trust in his dummy play, carried on to the notrump game. Eleven high-card points in each hand is not normally enough for a game contract. A low heart was led, and East won with the king and shifted to a low spade. South won with the king and ran the heart ten to wio the third.

With this diamond combination it is a close question whether o not the king should be cashed before leading to the jack. The declarer made the right decision as the cards lie by playing low toward the dummy. He was then able to take four more diamond tricks ending in the dummy.

There were now eight tricks in view, and the ninth was devaloped by an end play. The club nine was led and East put op the ace. Another spade was led, and South took the trick with the ace, and followed with the queen. West had saved two clubs. so had to concede a club trick at the finish when South led the queen. If West had saved the heart jack, dummy would have made the last trick in that suit. Note that East was at fault in the defense. He should have played low on the club lead from dummy, and allowed West to take the king and exit with the space jack. As long as West has pre-served his heart jack the declarer is then helpless.

How the Dolphins Keep Their Cool

By Dave Anderson

MIAMI, July 16 (NYT) .- In the hot sun at the gate to Biscayne College where the Miami Dolpirins hold their training camp. Doug Swift, the linebacker and player representative, wore a floppy red hat, a white T-shirt advertizing "Adidas" across the chest, hlue jeans, thong sandals and a National Football League Players Association picket sign. Nearby, red - white - and - blue bunning hung from the roof of a rented beige camper that was alr-conditioned. That way the Dolphin laborers could keep their cool along with the Dolphin management residing in air-condiboned offices during the labor dispute that has delayed their quest of an unprecedented third consecutive Super Bowl triumph. The team's experienced players scheduled to report Sunday but when their July 26 game with the College All-Sters was canceled, coach Don Shula decided that tomorrow was time enough. Only a handful of Dolphins with diamond-studded Super Bowl rings will cross the picket

"Jim Mandich has said he will. but he's not a member of the union," Swift said, "Jake Scott has said he will in order to protest the all-star game. He says he'll stay in until the 26th and then come out. There might be 140 or three others."

All-Star Issue

Down the road inside the high wire fence, beyond a few palm trees and a dusty parking lot, Shula sat in his air-conditioned command post in the rear of a low white hullding that houses the locker room, classrooms and offices. All around him were the memorabilia of two Super Bowl victories, with room for the souvenirs of a third.

"Canceling the all-star game was an injustice to our players," the coach was saying now. "They earned that money by winning the Super Bowl game. The players on the other teams didn't want the Dolphins to get a bead start on them."

The established Dolphins would have collected a game's pay based on the 1974 salaries for the allstar contest. For several nouveau riche with $100,000 contracts, that would have meant more than $7,000 each, According to an NFL executive familiar with the allstar game finances, the NPL team receives $135,000 as a flat fee. The Dolphin management would have been stung for the difference in salaries and expenses, perhaps as much as $100,000.

Strangely, the NFLPA not only

American as the greeting-card industry and counter - revolutionary police beroes. They must be celebrated, even when they are anniversaries ofdo we dare breathe the word? -revolutions.

Government, ever alert to the menace, has task forces deployed, trying to arrange something rousing yet dull for the occasion. Little has been accomplished so far because the task forces have been too busy investigating their members to make sure they all hate revolution. Many, many meetings are held. however meetings of groups like the task force on heroes, chaired by Art Bascom of the White House staff.

Baseom opened last week's meeting by asking if anybody had come up with any geouine revolutionary beroes who could be celebrated in 1976 without giving people the idea that revolutionaries could get away with any rough stuff. Perkius suggested Reginald Blintz-Quimper, Blintz-Quimper, it seems, was an off-duty policeman in Bostou during the time street mobs usco to treat private property with nanton disrespect. "One day," Perkins said. "Blintz-Quimper saw a lawless mou swarm aboard a ship in Boston harbor. It was leaded with tea, private property. With we respect at all for the ica, the mob begao dumping it into the water."

Blintz-Quimper happened to bo oassing the adjacent ship, Mary Anne, which had a large cargo of sugar, at the moment one of the mob said. "Let's go for the Mary Anne." Blintz-Quinvper, who couldn't stand people who put sugar in tea, drew his fintjock and threatened to shoot anyhody who failed to treat the sugar with respect.

"There were men of courage in those days." Bascom murmured, "but the guy sounds to me like be might have wound up on the king's side. That hyphenated name—Blintz-Quimper. A guy with a name like that could have wound up sitting in the House of Lords.

The task force voted to run a security check on Bliotz-Quimper, and then took up the case of Hans Harschenholtz, a German mercenary who single-handedly captured seven soldiers from Washingtoo's army one wintry night near Valley Forge.

"Hans Harschenholtz. Germao mercenaries," Bascom objected. "I don't like the image."

'The image is almost perfect," said Humpsenhorn. "When Hans brought the seven men into the light of his campfire, he saw that their clothes were filthy. They smelled terrible, because they hado't bathed in weeks. Their hair was down to their shoulder blades. And do you know what Hans said to them?

"He told them that he was going to send them all to Trenton for 30 days unless they agreed to wash, put on some clean pants and cut their hair."

Bascom said he liked the image. but wondered if Harschenholt: had stayed on in America after the revolution to live by the work ethic or gone back to Germany and had beirs who fell in with the Kaiser.

The task force wasn't doing enough investigating, he com-plained, "Which remaids me, has anybody had any fresh thoughts about the George Washington problem?

Everyone looked very gluin about having to ocal with this notorious revolutionary. Face it," said Henreddy, "this guy has record that makes Abbie Hoffmao look like a pillar of the establishment."

Belgian Show Puts Man, Environment on Spot

By Jan Sjöby NTWERP (IHT).—The ques-tion is not asked outright but it hangs in the air—mao has inherited the earth; what is he going to do with it? It used to thought that man was a product of his environment. But now it appears that the environment is rapidly becoming a product of man.

Belgian scientists, living and working in the most densely populated area in Europe, fcci that something has to be done. and quick-but when, where and how

An impressive array of Belgian scholars, ranging from cosmologists to anthropologists, from ecologists to toxicologists, have pooled their impressions and conclusions in a cross-disciplinary exhibition named "De Mens" man: in Antwerp's National Building Center. Sponsor of the mammoth show is the Antwerp municipality, with backing from the nettooal government.

"We haven't yet reached the point of no return," said Simonne Vieghels, chief of cultural affairs for Antwerp. "But we, and the rest of mankind, are rapidly approaching a bridgehead where we will find that all the bridges have been burned. That's wby we decided, some three years ago, to present the problem to toe

A marathon run through the 33,750 square feet of exhibition area requires at least a couple of hours. A serious student may speod a day oo the premises. There is, fortunately, a cafeteria.

Birth of a Planet The trail starts with cosmology -the birth of the planet and the eventual appearance of organic molecules. The question is asked:
"What is life?" and the answer is given by the classical criteria. "sensitivity, locomotion, metabo-lism, growth and reproduction."

"We wanted to present the story from beginning to end." salo Mrs. Viegbels, "to the best of our faith and knowledge." From physical anthropology to ethnology and physiology takes only a few steps. The eye and the ear are treated in separate sections. Sections bave been set aside on demographic questions and on various types of birth control. A thoughtprovoking display is gathered under the heading "Hunger." The economics of the planet, the exhibitors believe, are heading toward bankruptcy. Alternatives are outlined, sug-gesting that the traditional food chain iplants-herbivores-carni-vores; be replaced by some more rational cycle, drawing not from the grassroots but from the phytoplankton.

Water Cicansing The trail leads oo to models of two water-cleansing plants being developed in Antwerp. Oozy sludge is turned into clean water, the residue into fertilizer. Ten closed-circuit television, screens show relevant films, several of them in English. A slide show, involving 18 projectors and more than 900 color slides, is entitled En Toen Kwam de Mens And Then Came Man), and the work of photographers Marcel Verbruggen and Lude Vorssel-

The texts accompanying the exhibits are in Flemish only, as is the exhibition catalogue. "We toyed with the idea of Walloons and the French would have insisted on French texts and our German visitors would get their feelings hurt if we didn't present a German version. We simply didn't have the wall space or the manpower for a quadrilingual presentation."

But, much of the explanatory text is in scientese and it does not take too much imagination to. realize biosjeer means biosphere and that energiecrisis means energy crists. And there is an abbreviated, mimeographed summary in English, available at the entrance.

The pilgrim's progress winds up at a pile of junk: A bent-up, rusted bicycle, a broken chair, milk cartons and rusty beer cans. Didactic Dump

Your janitors haven't had time to clean up before opening?" asked a reporter. "Oh yes," said Mrs. Vleghels, "this is part of the exhibition. Some Arcadian may never have seen a real; genuine junk pile. This is a didactic garbage dump."

This disquieting exhibition will be open until the end of August. Mrs. Vleghels indicated that the show may be seen elsewhere later. "We have been negotiating." she said, "but no firm commit-ments have been made. But if any city or organization is interested in seeing our view of the human enigma, we'll be most
